with them based on lived experiences in their communities; 23

exposure to firearm violence and school support services that 26 decrease truancy and involvement with the criminal justice 27 system; 28

mental health conditions associated with post-traumatic stress 30

Sec. 5180.50. As used in sections 5180.50 to 5180.56 of 40
the Revised Code: 41

"Eligible county" means the fifteen counties in the state 42 with the highest per capita rate of fatal and nonfatal firearm- 43 shot victims excluding self-inflicted incidents, from January 1, 44 2018, to December 31, 2022. 45

"Evidence-based violence prevention services" means 46 coordinated programming and services that include effective 47 emotional or trauma-related therapies, housing, employment 48 training, job placement, family engagement, and wraparound 49 support services that have been proven effective or are 50 considered to be best practices for reducing violence within the 51 field of violence intervention research and practice. 52

"Evidence-based youth development programs" means after- 53 school and summer programming that provides services to teens to 54 increase school attendance and school performance, reduce 55 involvement in the criminal justice system, and develop 56 nonacademic interests that build social-emotional persistence 57 and intelligence based on best practices in the field of youth 58 development services for high-risk youth. 59

"Violence prevention organization" means an organization 60 that manages and employs qualified violence prevention 61 professionals. 62

"Violence prevention professional" means a community 63 health worker who renders violence preventive services. 64

Sec. 5180.51. The general assembly makes the following 65 findings: 66

(A) Certain areas across the state are experiencing 67 concentrated and perpetual firearm violence that is a public 68 health epidemic. 69

(B) Within areas experiencing this firearm violence 70 epidemic, violence is concentrated among teens and young adults 71 that have chronic exposure to the risk of violence and criminal 72 justice system involvement and related trauma in small 73 geographic areas where these young people live or congregate. 74

(C) Firearm violence victimization and perpetration is 75 highly concentrated in particular areas and among a small number 76 of individuals in these areas. 77

(D) People who are chronically exposed to the risk of 78 firearm violence victimization are substantially more likely to 79 be violently injured or to violently injure another person. 80 People who have been violently injured are substantially more 81 likely to be violently reinjured. Chronic exposure to violence 82 additionally leads individuals to engage in behavior, as part of 83 a cycle of community violence, trauma, and retaliation, that 84 substantially increases their own risk of violent injury or 85 reinjury. 86

(E) Evidence-based programs that engage individuals at the 87 highest risk of firearm violence and provide life stabilization, 88 case management, and culturally competent group and individual 89 therapy reduce firearm violence victimization and perpetration 90 and can end Ohio's firearm violence epidemic. 91

(F) A public health approach to ending Ohio's firearm 92 violence epidemic requires targeted, integrated behavioral 93 health services and economic opportunities that promote self- 94 sufficiency for victims of firearm violence and those with 95 chronic exposure to the risk of firearm violence victimization, 96 including services for criminal and juvenile justice-involved 97 populations and crisis response services, such as psychological 98 first aid. 99

(G) A public health approach to ending Ohio's firearm 100 violence epidemic further requires broader prevention 101 investments in the areas that reduce risk factors for youth and 102 families living in areas at the highest risk of firearm violence 103 victimization. 104

(H) A public health approach to ending Ohio's firearm violence epidemic requires empowering residents and community-based organizations within impacted areas to provide culturally competent care based on lived experience in these areas and long-term relationships of mutual interest that promote safety and stability. 105
106
108
109
110

(I) A public health approach to ending Ohio's firearm violence epidemic further requires that preventive youth development services for youth in these areas be fully integrated with a team-based model of mental health care to address trauma recovery for those young people at the highest risk of firearm violence victimization. 111
112
114
115
116

(J) Community revitalization can be an effective violence prevention strategy, provided that revitalization is targeted to the highest risk areas and revitalization efforts are designed and led by individuals living and working in the impacted areas. 117
118
120
